Michael Blanchard is a photographer, writer, and gallery owner on Martha's Vineyard whose work is rooted in recovery, hope, and the healing power of art. After getting sober in 2010, he discovered photography not as a career plan, but through an unexpected moment of inspiration that changed the direction of his life — a reminder that sometimes the most important paths begin when we listen.

Photography became a lifeline — a way to reconnect with beauty, community, and spirit. That journey led him to publish two books, Through a Sober Lens and Fighting for My Life, both honored with Ben Franklin Awards for inspirational writing and photography. His recovery story has resonated widely, earning endorsements from Jamie Lee Curtis and Lance Bass, and his Crossroads Gallery was named Best Gallery on Martha's Vineyard in 2019. His work has been featured in Vineyard Style, Cape Cod Life, Photography Today, and other publications, and Recovery Today Magazine once called him "the Ansel Adams of Recovery Photography."

Michael has raised more than $50,000 for island nonprofits through his annual calendars and regularly donates his time and work to support addiction recovery and mental health programs. Through speaking, writing, workshops, and simple conversations with strangers who walk into the gallery in tears, he shares a message that beauty can save us, community holds us up, and no one is beyond hope.

Thank you to Men's Alliance for service support, flowers and refreshments for today's service.
